

THE WEALTH OF THE COUNTRY AT THE CLOSE OF 1902.

If the total wealth of the United States were divided equally among the 79,000,000 inhabitants of the country, each man, woman and child would have $1,320. These figures are based on the census returns, which show the total wealth of the country to be ninety-four billion and some odd hundred million dollars.

WOMEN'S CLUBS TO VOTE ON UNION

Meeting of Over a Hundred Representatives of City Association to Consider Plans is Lively.

REFERENDUM IS AGREED ON.

Decision is that Proposition for Federation Will Be Passed Upon by the Societies and Their Representatives Will Meet Again.

After an argumentative meeting of more than two hours' duration one hundred or more club women assembled at the Lotus, Nos. 113 and 115 West Seventy-ninth street, came to the decision that they were not yet prepared to decide upon the formation of a City Federation of Women's Clubs.

The hands of the clock were pointed toward 5 o'clock when Mrs. Dore Lyon, of the Electric Club and Vice-President of the State Federation, brought a tangible fact out of chaos with the suggestion that a committee of seven or nine be appointed by the chairman to draw up a plan for such an organization to be submitted to the various clubs.

The meeting was representative, the first for it having invited representatives of every woman's club to attend. This was signed by Mrs. Charlotte B. Wilbur, of Sorosis; Mrs. Clarence Burns, the Little Mothers' Association; Mrs. August J. Wilson, of the West End African Club; Mrs. Dore Lyon, of the Electric Club; Mrs. Belle de Rivera, of the New Century Club.

For Important Work. de Rivera said that on a careful study of the various clubs she had the opinion that almost unanimous support would be accorded by federating the city clubs. "There is strength," said de Rivera, "and by bringing together this corporate body of women's clubs a greater amount of good could be accomplished than individually. A primary reason for federating is the of a club-house where a financial need could be effected by saving the expense of having various clubs meeting.

If course, I have met with difficulties," continued de Rivera. "One club man argued that the individuals in the club would suffer. Another argued that a club thriving for power would take the in its hands and force other men into the background. Another said that we are too much organized today, but in answer to this last I only point to the most highly organized body—the church of Rome." Mrs. Harry Hastings, President of the Sorosis Club, made temporary chairman, and Miss Mary H. Hay temporary secretary.

Mrs. de Rivera's motion that the federation of New York City clubs be formed started an intricate discussion at did not spare in its details the ammatrical construction of the sentence in which the motion was made.

The question which arose most persistently was whether the women present were empowered to form a city federation. In vain Mrs. Hastings as chairman tried to quell the overflow of opinions. At last the chairman requested all who had the power to vote on the proposition to stand.

Mrs. Belle Gray Taylor, of the Professional Women's League, took the floor, but the figure of "Aunt Louisa," Elbridge rose in dispute of that point.

Chairman Perplexed. The chairman looked from Mrs. Taylor to "Aunt Louisa."

"Well, I was sent here to see what was going on and to investigate," said the latter. "I don't care to vote."

"I guess I'm not a delegate either," said Mrs. Taylor, and the meeting was resumed.

The Rev. Phoebe B. Hanford was so enthusiastic in her protests of Sorosis indifference toward the plan that Mrs. Hastings was obliged to ask her to depart, as her remarks might have undue influence on the formation of the federation.

Mrs. Ravenhill, of Sorosis, was one of the opponents of the City Federation. "I see no necessity for any more federations," she said.

The cry was raised that the City Federation would bring about the disruption of the State Federation.

"It will be a menace to the State Federation," said the Rev. Phoebe Hanford, "and is designed to centralize all the power in New York."

be united. The State Federation cannot help us in such a movement. "In no way would the City Federation weaken the State Federation," said Mrs. Dore Lyon. It would strengthen it. We would work together. There is an ornamental side to the question also. Many brilliant women who shine only in their individual clubs will be able to impart their ideas to the other club women. In the State Federation election matters would also be facilitated.

The great object of the whole movement," said Mrs. Harry Hastings, "is that we work together. In the present car transportation trouble if the women would act together instead of dividing up in various clubs greater results would be accomplished. There are many things women together can accomplish. The Western Federation of the State Clubs and the Allegany County clubs are two examples of what federated interests may do."

Mrs. Dore Lyon's motion that a committee be appointed to draw up a circular to be sent to the various clubs which

CANTOR IGNORED WRIT.

Work on the City Hall was stopped by the police to-day by order of Borough President Cantor. There would have been no necessity for calling upon the police had Contractor Ryan obeyed the Borough President's order.

But Ryan, who was appraised in advance of President Cantor's intentions, had seen his lawyers, and they advised him to continue operations until stopped by a superior power. The lawyers obtained an injunction against the President of the Borough restraining him from interfering with the work. A copy of the injunction, which was granted yesterday by Justice Scott, was served on President Cantor at his residence last night.

When Ryan and his men were told to-day not to begin work they vigorously objected. Ryan told his men to "go ahead" and that most highly organized body—the church of Rome.

The next meeting was set for Jan. 15, at the Lotus, and as all clubs are expected to send delegates empowered to act for or against the federation the question of whether New York City will form the strongest body of club women in the United States will be decided.

It's all a move for the Manhattan club women to get things into their own hands," said an indignant Brooklyn woman. "I know one woman who is pushing the movement just so she can become president of the State Federation. It isn't fair for New York City to robble up everything."

"One thing I want," said Mrs. Belle Gray Taylor, "is to see the federation formed and Mrs. Clarence Burns made president."

EVENING WORLD RE-UNITED THEM

Long-Lost Daughter of Wealthy Chicago Man, Now a Married Woman, Restored to Him in Brooklyn.

KIDNAPPED BY HER MOTHER.

Parents Had Separated and the Wife Stole Her Little Girl Seventeen Years Ago, When Child Was Five Years Old.

A story in The Evening World has resulted in the re-union of a father and his daughter after a separation of seventeen years following the kidnapping of the daughter by her mother, when she was five years old.

The father is Francis Rosborg, an attorney, auditor and stockholder in the Pullman Company, in Chicago. The daughter is now Mrs. Alison H. Boyles, the wife of an official of the Equitable Life Assurance Society. She lives at No. 719 Halsey street, Brooklyn, in a comfortable home.

Mr. Boyles, with the assent of his wife and her father, informed The Evening World to-day of the happy termination brought about by the investigation of the story as it was published. On Sept. 17 last The Evening World announced that a woman had arrived in Brooklyn searching for Marion Josephine Rosborg, who was kidnapped seventeen years ago from her father's home on Michigan avenue, Chicago.

The child was then five years old. The father and mother had separated, and when the child was four years old her mother first kidnapped her, but she was recovered a month later by her father. But after the second kidnapping she was never heard from.

Employed Child's Old Nurse.

The woman who had arrived in Brooklyn had been the child's nurse, and after raising her with the father employed her to seek the child. She had been working seven years, travelling everywhere, at a great expense to the father, whose affection for his lost daughter never diminished. There were no clues. There was little hope, but the father had said to the nurse:

"She will be a young woman when you find her, and you are the only one who could possibly recognize her. The chances are few, but it will do me good to even know that I am doing something to find her."

The story was read by Alison H. Boyles, a girl waiting for the Equitable Life Assurance Society he had met for several years the pretty head waitress of a hotel in Saratoga. The acquaintance had resulted in love and marriage. They were married last summer. He brought her to Brooklyn and established her in a fine home.

Her name was Marion Josephine Rosborg, and she had told him she was seven years old when she was kidnapped. He knew absolutely nothing about her early life, except that she had been in a family in some city where there was an old woman and her grown son. She remembered that when she was about seven years old the woman had taken her to the Catholic orphan asylum in Charleston, S. C.

She had been educated until she was sixteen years old, when she was placed in a position to earn her own living. Since then she had been a waitress in Boston and Saratoga hotels.

He had been speaking his last hours in Seventh avenue, near One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street, when he knocked down Mr. Kutner's mother, Mrs. Albert Kutner, of No. 157 West One Hundred and Twenty-third street; his daughter, Mrs. Clark Torin, of No. 46 West One Hundred and Seventeenth street, and her granddaughter, Julia Torin, aged seven years. Mrs. Kutner is sixty-six years old.

Mrs. Kutner said two of his mother's ribs were broken and that she was in a very serious condition in J. Wood Wright Hospital, where Mrs. Torin was also suffering from an injured neck. The little girl was not hurt beyond a few bruises.

He decided to press a criminal charge against Sweeney. Magistrate Zeiler said all he could do was to parole Sweeney to the custody of his wife, to await the result of Mrs. Kutner's injuries, and advised Mr. Kutner to begin an investigation of his own.

He had no recourse to criminal prosecution. He was furious at Sweeney, and said the injury to the women was an outrage and caused by vicious carelessness.

OLD YEAR AND DEBT MAY GO TOGETHER

Members of Church of Epiphany Will Watch Together for Philanthropist to Save Edifice.

Unless some philanthropist comes to their rescue before midnight with $13,000 the members of the Church of Epiphany, Tompkins avenue and McDonald street, Brooklyn, are likely to lose their handsome edifice. They will hold a watch meeting to see the old year out and will hope until the last minute to see the debt go out with it.

The Rev. Dean Richmond Abbott has been working night and day to wipe out a mortgage of $2,500 and interest of $1,100. George Foster Peabody has promised to pay the interest and $15,000 has been promised conditionally on the raising of the full amount.

CUSTOMS RECEIPTS UP.

Increase of More Than $20,000,000 Over Last Year.

Total receipts and payments by the Sub-Treasury for the year aggregated $5,777,827,897, a decrease of over $137,422,000 compared with last year's operations. Customs receipts amounted to $1,875,435,481, an increase of more than $20,000,000 over last year.

Payments for account of interest were less by over $5,000,000 than 1901, while pension payments exceeded last year's by $1,500,000. Total currency and coin shipped amounted to $19,422,700, almost $10,000,000 greater than last year.

BIG 4 A SMALL BUNCH, SAYS BILL

Mr. Devery, Even After His Good Night's Rest, Has No Kindly Feeling for Tammany Leaders, Who Turned Him Down.

HE'S NOT THROUGH YET.

Says They Have Their Bets Down Wrong and Will Show Them a Trick Before the Four-Flush Game is Played Out.

"I'm onto the game that the 'Big Four' over in Fourteenth street is playing," said the Hon. Bill Devery as he greeted the faithful at the Pump to-day. "It's not a freeze-out against me, but it's a bum political trick to force me into line for their candidate for Senator."

"Some wise guy who thinks he knows how to roll the ball in politics has asked me for a come-on and put his stack on the State Senate as a play I'd be sure to make. Now let me put you next. I wouldn't take the job, as my friend Mark Hanna said of the Presidency. There's nothing in it. Albany is a dead end for a live proposition like your Uncle Bill. I want to be where the bricks are flying and where real men are needed, and I wish to notify all trespassers that I am ready to stick up for all that's comin' to me right here in little old New York."

A Small Bunch, He Says.

"Now, the gang that's in control over on Fourteenth street ain't such a bunch. They're playing the same kind of politics that Peanut Dave, the bald prophet of ill-omen, played at Saratoga. That game of his lost the State to the Democracy and the kindergarten bunch that's trying to run the Tammany machine will put into a blind street if they don't watch out."

"Charlie Murphy thinks he can make the people believe he got out the big Tammany vote at the last election. He didn't have any more to do with it than the Sultan of Sulu. When he got up in the morning after election day and looked over the returns he had to slap himself on the chest three times before he could clinch it that he was awake. The big Tammany vote was polled because the people of this city like Coler. They don't know Charlie Murphy from a cord of wood."

Who's the Shoestring?

"But they're getting acquainted with him. They're getting next to his last side. If the leader of Tammany Hall thinks it is good politics to turn down a man elected leader by the people of his district he's welcome to his rave. He's not turning me down. He's turning down the Democratic voters of the Ninth to help out a shoestring politician who wants to get his man to the State Senate."

"Four-flush politics won't do. The people of the Ninth made up their minds, and I'm going to be the leader. They haven't got anything against me. They can't show any reason why I shouldn't be seated. Say, if they'd uncover the records of that bunch over there you'd think Bureau Island had moved up into Fourteenth street."

"I wasn't surprised at the turn-down. I got at Saratoga, but this time last night caught me on the solar plexus. I thought some opposition might develop, but I didn't look for a skin game. Like the one they put up on me. It goes to show how much good it does to have friends. Men on that committee that I've stood for and helped when they needed help turned on me. I'll show them that they have their backs down wrong before I get through. I haven't lived all my life in this town for nothing."

Postal cards were sent out early to-day by Devery's chief secretary, Eddie Schneider, calling a meeting of the Democratic General Committee of the Ninth District for 8 o'clock to-night at No. 284 Eighth avenue. The cards do not mention the object of the meeting, but Schneider says he called the meeting to discuss the committee's consideration of a protest will be made to Tammany.

The protest which was entered against Devery and filled with the Committee on Credentials will not be made public until after the meeting. Senator James Frawley was elected chairman and George B. Best secretary. It was decided to meet the committee at 8 o'clock at once with the Bureau of Elections and to again meet at the call of the chair.
